TIM CLIFFORD

Available for customized school and district training or conference appearances!

About Tim

Tim Clifford is a native New Yorker who has taught English for more than 20 years in New York City schools. His experience has given him insight into teaching writing skills to diverse populations. As a middle-school English teacher, he felt the need for resources specifically targeted to students in this age group, and so he decided to fill the gap by writing his first book, The Middle School Writing Toolkit: Differentiated Instruction across the Content Areas.

He also authored Crafting Opinion and Persuasive Papers (Maupin House), three books from Rourke's Let's Explore Science series and three volumes from Rourke's World of Science Encyclopedia. He is currently working on his first novel for young adults as well as education books on author studies and genre studies. Tim will also be publishing three graphic novels in 2009.

Tim is a graduate of SUNY/New Paltz, where he earned his B.A. in English. He earned a masters degree in English/secondary education from the City University of New York at Queens College.

Through the Maupin House Speakers Bureau, Tim customizes professional development to fit the needs of his audience. See booking information below.
